++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy at first but some bright spells developing.

Today:
Rather cloudy at first, with the chance of some light rain or drizzle in places. Slowly brightening up through the morning, with sunny intervals developing by the afternoon. In any sunshine it will feel relatively warm given light winds. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Tonight:
It will stay mostly cloudy overnight but some clearer intervals are likely and this will allow a few mist and fog patches to form in places. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Thursday:
Thursday will be another rather cloudy day but some brief brighter intervals are still likely. Thickening cloud later in the day across Cumbria with rain likely arriving by dark. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Rain clearing south on Thursday evening. Colder but much sunnier on Friday with a local frost at first. Rather cloudy on Saturday and Sunday with occasional light rain in Cumbria.
